

North Pocono

Devyn performs tobacco compliance check inspections at the DA's office.

"We drive around with a detective and district attorney, and we check to make sure stores are complying with tobacco age restrictions," she said.

The daughter of Jill and Hosiah Davis, Devyn is enrolled in AP physics, language and composition, and biology.

She is a member of National Honor Society and has made high honor roll every quarter of her high school career.

A member of Students Against Destructive Decisions and Red Cross clubs, she is also a Science Olympiad member and has competed in multiple competitions and attended a Science Olympiad state conference.

She plays tennis for the North Pocono girls varsity tennis team and Birchwood tennis league and takes tennis lessons. She started on varsity this year although it was only her first year officially playing the sport.

Outside of school, she is a member of Tomorrow's Leaders Today. The youth leadership program helps high school juniors develop leadership, interpersonal and managerial skills.

After high school, Devyn plans go to dental school and become an orthodontist. But first, she would like to attend the University of Pittsburgh, the University of North Carolina or Nova Southeastern University and major in neuroscience.
