North Pocono

North Pocono seniors Aaron Goryl and Scott Lougee came in first and second out of 153 local students in the individual competition at the annual University of Scranton Kane Contests earlier this month.

The physics competition included 24 local teams and emphasized real-life application of the discipline.

During the competition, students take a rigorous college-level physics exam designed to challenge students at all levels of physics, after which the top three finishers move on to a "Jeopardy!"-style contest.

Aaron earned a $500 scholarship and Scott received a $300 scholarship.
